ARGOS NAUTIC RECONFIGURES PRODUCTION SPACE

In preparation for future production demands and projected growth, Argos Nautic has implemented a complete reconfiguration of its manufacturing space. The forward-looking change is prompted by several new models of custom luxury RIB tenders in the final stages of planning.

Argos Nautic implemented numerous lean production methodologies. Each step of the manufacturing process now has its own dedicated production bay, maximizing the effectiveness of the space for the technician, while minimizing wasted effort. It also allows the boatbuilder to nimbly respond to future shifts in consumer demand. The company added staff and a new showroom to keep pace with the increase in orders.

"We have always been about craftsmanship and attention to every detail—with a hyper-modern twist," said Juan Mestre, Argos Nautic sales and marketing director. "By streamlining, however, we introduce improved efficiencies that will allow us to build an even better boat."

Argos Nautic is the market leader in luxury bespoke RIB tenders. It offers outboard and jet-powered boats, from 10' to 13' 6". Strikingly different, they are built with the discriminating owner in mind.
