

LOW

HIGH

Lodge 10½ inch Square Cast Iron Grill Pan

When it comes to getting gorgeous sear marks and hints of smoke on proteins and veggies on the stove, cast iron is the ticket. This affordable preseasoned pan is ready to use out of the box, and the cooking surface only gets better over time.

$28, lodgemfg.com

GRILL PANS

Staub 13 inch Square Double-Handled Grill Pan

This heirloom-worthy enameled pan has all the heat-retentive attributes of cast iron but with a rust-resistant cooking surface that doesn't require any special care. Double handles make it easy to transfer from stove top to oven. $200, zwilling.com

George Foreman Smokeless Grill

Juicy burgers and tender veggies, complete with grill marks, can be had without stepping foot outside thanks to this compact, easy-to-store, virtually smokeless contact grill. The top plate means you don't have to flip your food, saving time.

$70, walmart.com

INDOOR GRILLS

Kenyon City Grill

Perfect for the condo dweller, this flameless electric grill gets hot enough to get a good sear on your steaks without setting off the smoke alarm, plus it's safe for both indoor and outdoor use. The nonstick cooking grate and lid come off for easy cleanup. $475, cookwithkenyon.com

Char-Broil Patio Bistro Tru-Infrared Electric Grill

No need for a fuel tank! This electric barbecue is made for tight spaces such as balconies. It has 240 square inches of cooking surface (think 12 burgers) and a warming rack, as well as rust-resistant porcelain-coated grates for even cooking.

$180, charbroil.com

SMALL-SPACE GRILLS

Napoleon TRAVELQ PRO285X

This compact propane model performs like a full-size barbecue, and a wheeled scissor cart makes it the ultimate grill for tailgating and camping. Two burners offer the flexibility of indirect cooking, and a cast-aluminum hood helps keep heat in during cooler weather. $450, napoleon.com

Weber Spirit S-315

Rookie or master, you can't go wrong with this three-burner model from a reliable brand. It has a generous 424-square-inch porcelain-enameled cast iron cooking surface plus a warming rack and stainless steel flavorizer bars to shield the flames to prevent flare-ups. $600, weber.com

BACKYARD BBQS

Broil King Regal S590 PRO

If you're as likely to be grilling on Thanksgiving as you are on the Fourth of July, then this is the barbecue for you. It has plenty of cooking space for entertaining, plus extras like stainless steel grids, light-up knobs, a rotisserie kit and a side burner. $1,400, broilkingbbq.com